June 2013

Nichiren Daishonin states in “On the Doctrine of Ichinen Sanzen”:

Even though one has compounded one hundred or one thousand kinds of medicines, if he never takes them, he will never recover from his illness.

Even though one’s storehouse may be full of treasures, if he does not open it, he will starve to death.

Likewise, if one does not know that he has to take the medicine in his pocket, he will die.
